Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: . stations and 6 versts of wire per regiment, and sometimes purchased at the expense of the latter). The equipment pertaining to corps headquarters was withdrawn and put at the disposition of army headquarters, and the like. We must regard the telephone as especially useful for regimental use while occupying positions within the divisions and between headquarters of neighbouring divisions. For the larger units it is preferable to employ the telegraph, because the possibility of talking by telephone with all the subordinate officers leads superior headquarters to wish to know everything and direct everything, and this to such an extent that there often results interference with the initiative of subordinates, a superabundance of orders, embarrassment, and even orders contrarv to those of the immediate chiefs. It is reported that an electric line between Chicago and St. Louis is contemplated. The present Illinois traction system, known as the McKinley route, will be the nucleus of the greater system. The Design of Blast-Furnace Gas Engines in Belgium By H. HUBERT A Paper Head at the Recent Meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute. THE first attempts at direct utilization of blast-furnace gas engines were made in 1895. For a considerable time the gas had been burnt in Cowper stoves for heating the blast for the furnace, and under the boilers which supplied steam to the blowing engines, and others serving the furnaces. It was natural, therefore, that the idea of directly employing it in gas engines should have...
