At 4 . m. , whilst sounding, saw from the deck the peak of Fernando de Noronha, bearing S. 840 W. , (true, ) distant 40 nautical miles. Our position at the time was deduced from good observations of the sun at noon for latitude, and by good observations of the moon and Venus at twilight that evening, which gave agreeing results for longitude. This position has been cgrrected for the error of the mean of our chronometers, ascertained two days afterwards on the meridian of the citadel of Fernando, (in longitude 340 24 27 from our measurement of the. difference of longitude between this citadel and Fort Picao in longitude 340 5145.
